

* Dance as an Aesthetic Art Expresses the culture identity and historical relevance of its native land with special reference to India, Scotland and South Africa.

①

Dance To Express By - Sahil Jain

"To be fond of dancing was a certain step towards falling in love"
- Jane Austen

Dance is more than just a sport, it's a passion. Throughout the history dancing has always been an important part of our culture, society and rituals. This is considered as the most effective and ancient means of communication and people over the world have their traditional dance style but also their culture and history.

In India dances are broadly ~~classified~~ divided into classical dances and folk dances. The classical dances are usually the spiritual in content. Though the folk dances are also spiritual and religious in content but ~~also~~ the main force behind the folk dances is celebratory mood. There are numerous forms of classical dance and folk dance. Each of forms represents different part of culture, tradition and people. Dance is the form of expression of human feelings. In Scotland, nothing captures the spirit of Scottish culture better than the highland dancing. Highland dancing being performed in highland gathering at some far flung corner of the world. According to the tradition, old kings and clan chiefs used the highland games to select best men at arms. In South Africa Zulu dance is ~~the~~ important part of ~~the~~ ~~South~~ African culture. Zulu dance is usually performed during a traditional Ceremony and is accompanied by vibrant singing and beating of drums.

Dancing is one of the ancient way of communication. People's presentation of happiness, sadness, prayer, story and wishes through different form of dancing. Dancing is an excellent mean of conveying the human feelings.

Dance of a particular country reflects the culture, tradition, and history. It helps people to keep their traditions alive through the ages. Dancing is always be a part of our culture, society and tradition.

Class = 8T - F