Colours

The sun above is bright and yellow
We call each other and say "Hello!"
Oceans are deep and blue.
We should always be honest and true.
The night sky is dark and black.
To naughty children, mummy gives a smack.
Roses are so pretty and red,
After supper, it's time for bed.
The grass in the garden is wet and green
We should never ever be mean.
The milk we drink is very white,
Little children are naughty, so they fight.

Role of youth in National development

Youth is the future of a country. Any idea of national development is just a myth without the active participation of youth in it. National development is like a relay race. The old generation passes on the baton to the waiting team. The young have dreams, passions and hopes. They are impatient and dynamic. Their bubbling enthusiasm has to be regulated and utilized. Their surplus powers has to be exploited for the welfare of the country. Proper guidance and direction can take them in the front lane of national development.

The government of India has been rather slow to recognise the role of youth in national development. Even the state government and voluntary organizations have not been much different. No doubt, the N.C.C. and N.S.S. provide a useful platform. They train the youth of the country to be dedicated volunteers in natural calamities and in war. They have proved their worth in running relief works in the earthquake affected areas in Gujarat N.S.S. units have successfully utilized the youth power for national development. Be it growing more trees or keeping the environment clean or adult - literacy programmes, the young N.S.S. volunteers have done a wonderful job. The youth should be engaged in constructive and gainful works. We should not let their youthful energy go waste, let us channelize, organize and utilize the youth for national development.

Gender Discrimination with 'Girls'

The number of girls born and surviving in India has hit an all time low compared to boys. A new born baby girl has been found abandoned in the dustbin, near the Government Hospital. A male child was been stolen from the Government Medical College. In an India State, there are just 300 girls to every 1,000 boys among higher caste families. For example once a poor farmer curses his fate. He is the father of eight girls, whose names he does not even remember, These are some gender discriminations with girls in society.
